Demonstration:

Wisconsin Talking Books & Braille Library

People who suffer from low vision can remain independent by taking advantage of assistive technologies that are designed for people with visual challenges. Low vision products include reading and video magnifiers, talking clocks and computer software. People with eye conditions may be able to read large print books and magazines more comfortably than traditional-sized print, either alone or with the help of assistive devices.

Many people with vision loss will use a combination of several different sight impaired aids to accomplish routine tasks.

Kathleen Bronson will share what simple products and services are available to make life easier for those who are visually impaired and where they can be obtained. She will explain what different agencies work with the blind and visually impaired.

Randi Johnson will demonstrate Enhanced Vision products. Since 1996, Enhanced Vision has been on the forefront of low vision magnification, designed to effectively assist the visually impaired by utilizing the latest in cutting edge technology, combined with practical application.

This month's Senior Wellness Morning is sponsored by ENHANCED VISION
