This is the plan we’ve been following. To open ourselves to many possibilities and opinions, make sense of it, and come to some conclusions. Tonight we are at the arrow: building a shared understanding of the strategic issues affecting the park and how they could be addressed.
Next month, City staff will give some insight on the feasibility of ideas you come up with tonight, we’ll do some revisions, and also prioritize responses if needed which will lead into May when we’ll have some draft recommendations to share.
Last month you started with the list of vision themes originally brainstormed in the fall and narrowed them down to this list on the left.

You identified some terms that weren’t appropriate for a vision statement but that you expect to still be present in your work on the right.

They will likely be integrated into strategies and other parts of the recommendations report.

Remember a vision statement:
• Describes the ideal future.
• Is where you want to be at a future date.
• Is inspiring
• Captures the uniqueness, ambitions, and high hopes of an organization or group
Last month you wrote some draft vision statements based on these themes, and then highlighted the words and phrases you liked best. There were too many for the group to work more on, so Patrick agreed to take those ideas and draft some new options that combined your thoughts.
Patrick took the words and phrases that were underlined and made four different statement options. He said these all say close to the same thing using slightly different phrasing and word order.

The group discussed these choices, and options 3 and 4 were favorites.
The group edited four a little as shown above in red and voted unanimously to accept that as the Vision Statement for the park.
“A strategic issue is a fundamental policy choice or change challenge affecting an organization’s

- mandates,
- mission,
- product or service level and mix,
- clients or users,
- costs,
- financing,
- structure,
- processes, or
- management.”

Next we focused on strategic issues. They are the MOST IMPORTANT things going on, the issues that you’ll need to address in the next 1-3 years to assure success into the future.

The group received the Worksheet 25: Operational Versus Strategic Issues.
Operational issues are usually examples of the problem-solving that will need to happen after a strategic issues is identified.

“More staff” could be a solution to a strategic question, but you don’t want to hire staff until you are clear on what the issue is that needs resolving.

This committee is tasked with identifying the STRATEGIC ISSUES affecting the park. Later in the evening we will get to ways those issues could be addressed, but we’re going to stay here for the next hour or so, because identifying and framing the issues can be tricky.
How you frame an issue can determine how you think about it, what potential solutions are possible, and what the outcomes are.

If the City can’t do something about it, it’s more of a condition or constraint, but not a strategic issue for the City (maybe for someone else…)

If there’s only one option, then it’s a choice about what action to take. Joe encouraged you to think broadly about the Park, and you’ve committed yourselves to thinking about all kinds of options. If it’s a big issue, there are going to be many possibilities for how to respond.
Here’s an example of how framing an issue differently can lead to different types of responses.

<td>How can we keep the bars from selling too much alcohol to students?</td>
<td>Outreach/education to bar owners and employees; Legislation or policy changes at the state level</td>
<td>Will bar owners listen to us? Politically difficult to challenge the Tavern League; Expensive to do a successful legislative campaign</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>How can we keep kids who have had too much to drink from driving and endangering themselves?</td>
<td>Alternative transportation methods near campus; Positive peer pressure among students</td>
<td>Easier to make partnerships with local public and private transportation sources; Peer pressure is known to be effective in reducing drinking and driving;</td>

The group got into small groups based on what they had worked on last time.

They used the blank Issue Framing Worksheet and the SWOC Summary from 2.24.15 to frame some questions, outline the solution space that framing leads to, and what consequences could be.

After 15-20 minutes, they wrote their best questions on the flip charts for everyone to see and discuss.

The following slides show the flip-charts as this exercise unfolded. The typed version of this work in an organized format is available separately.
Strategic Issue Questions: Quality of Life

- How do you improve physical health of community?
- How do we improve social well-being of community?
- How do we improve cultural and diversity awareness in community?
Strategic Issue Questions: Gathering Place

GATHERING PLACE

1. How can the city increase access to the park by water?

2. How can the city upgrade amenities that showcase the park as the jewel of EBL?

3. How do we market the park and its offerings?
Strategic Issue Questions: Historical

1. How do we make history relevant to today, especially for younger generations and new comers?

2. How can we preserve current historical traditions while becoming more inclusive of our changing demographics and potential new comers?
Strategic Issue Questions: Moving Into The Future

What are the potential funding sources for future activities?

How do we get community support for proposed activities?

What is the potential for national or state organizations to have an active role in future developments?

Moving Into The Future
Strategic Issue
Questions:
Destination

1. HOW CAN WE PROVIDE MORE ACCESS AND SERVICES FOR TRANSIENT BOATERS?

2. CAN WE TIE (OR HOW SOON CAN WE TIE) THE LAKEFRONT AT LAKEVIEW TO THE LOOP?

3. HOW CAN WE STOP STINKY POINT FROM DISTRACTING FROM PARK EXPERIENCE?
After reviewing all of the questions and noting some similarities and overlap among them, the group voted on their top priorities. Which ones are most important for the park? Each person received 5 dots to put next to questions in whichever way they wanted to (5 on 1 question, 1 on 5 different questions, etc.)

Above is the summary of the questions receiving the top number of votes and the vote count.

The group did a “gut check” on these and decided to edit the first two questions slightly to better reflect the priority they were getting at with their votes and in the previous discussions.

The updated first question was, “How can we provide more access both to and from the Lake?” and the updated second question was, “How can we upgrade amenities and services that showcase the Park as the jewel of Fond du Lac?”

Now the groups brainstormed responses to the strategic questions. The partner groups worked on the designated question above and then switched to another question to categorize the responses the previous group had thought of.

The categorized responses filled in the blank when the question was re-worded as a statement. “We will _____________ by _____________."
